

UDM Current Titans

Raftr Implementation Team
January 2026

Rafr is the University's community engagement platform that allows Detroit Mercy to connect as one campus-wide community while also supporting smaller subcommunities such as colleges/schools, academic departments, student organizations. It serves as a central space for sharing and discovering campus events - including academic programming, student organization activities, and student life events - and is also used by offices such as the Office of the Registrar and Office of Scholarships and Financial Aid to communicate and engage directly with students.

Students are automatically invited to join UDM Current Titans and are placed into Rafr communities (called rafts) based on their primary academic program. Each college or school has a dedicated raft that includes all of its students, with separate channels for academic departments to support targeted, program- and department-specific communication.

Students are also automatically connected to rafts for key student support offices, including the Office of Scholarship and Financial Aid, Office of the Registrar, Residence Life (for on-campus students), Student Life, the Wellness Center, and the Center for Career and Professional Development. This structure allows information to be shared directly with the appropriate student audiences without requiring students to self-enroll.

Want to join the fun?

Faculty are not automatically added to Rafr, but participation is strongly encouraged. Faculty who would like access should email titansapp@udmercy.edu from their Detroit Mercy email address and include their college or school and academic department so they can be connected to the appropriate communities.

Go Titans!!

Your college experience should be more than just a classroom education. You are more than your major and the Detroit Mercy experience extends beyond academics. Connect with resources, updates, and Titans here!
